NEW QUESTION: 3 You create a cloud-hosted SharePoint app. You must make the app available in the SharePoint Store for customers to install on their host webs. You need to keep the style and navigation of the app the same as the host web of the app after it is installed by any customer. What should you do? A. Add a reference to SP.UI.Controls.js on the host web. Pass the AppUrl parameter to the host web. Apply branding to the host web. B. Use a Chrome control to find the differences in the styles between the host web and the app. Resolve all of the differences by using JavaScript. C. Use an app template and an app.master master file for branding. D. Add a reference to the SP.UI.Controls.js file located in the new /_layouts/15 directory. Pass the HostUrl parameter to the start page of the app. Use the Chrome control in the HTML page in a declarative manner. Answer: D Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Microsoft allows developers to import a very basic version of the SharePoint 2013 chrome into their apps without having to manually create matching HTML controls. The functionality for this can be found in the SP.UI.Controls.js file located in the new /_layouts/15 directory. To use the chrome control, first add a reference to SP.UI.Controls.js (make sure you've already loaded the requisite JQuery files and other dependencies), then add an empty  to your page markup at or near the top of the page. NEW QUESTION: 4 In Layer 2 topologies, spanning-tree failures can cause loops in the network. These unblocked loops can cause network failures because of excessive traffic. Which two Catalyst 6500 features can be used to limit excessive traffic during spanning-tree loop conditions? (Choose two.)A. broadcast suppressionB. BPDU guardC. storm suppressionD. storm controlE. loop guardAnswer: A,D*Explanation:Explanation Traffic Storm Control A traffic storm occurs when packets flood the LAN, creating excessive traffic and degrading network performance. The traffic storm control feature prevents LAN ports from being disrupted by a broadcast, multicast, or unicast traffic storm on physical interfaces. Traffic storm control (also called traffic suppression) monitors incoming traffic levels over a 1-second traffic storm control interval and, during the interval, compares the traffic level with the traffic storm control level that you configure. The traffic storm control level is a percentage of the total available bandwidth of the port. Each port has a single traffic storm control level that is used for all types of traffic (broadcast, multicast, and unicast). Traffic storm control monitors the level of each traffic type for which you enable traffic storm control in 1-second traffic storm control intervals. Within an interval, when the ingress traffic for which traffic storm control is enabled reaches the traffic storm control level that is configured on the port, traffic storm control drops the traffic until the traffic storm control interval ends. Broadcast suppression Broadcast suppression prevents the switched ports on a LAN from being disrupted by a broadcast storm on one of the ports. A LAN broadcast storm occurs when the broadcast or multicast packets flood the LAN, creating excessive traffic and degrading the network performance. Errors in the protocol-stack implementation or in the network configuration can cause a broadcast storm. Broadcast suppression uses filtering that measures the broadcast activity on a LAN over a time period (15264 nsec to ~1 sec) that varies based on the type of line card and speed setting on the port, and compares the measurement with a predefined threshold. If the threshold is reached, further broadcast activity is suppressed for the duration of a specified time period. Broadcast suppression is disabled by default.Reference
