NEW QUESTION: 3A network design calls for a "router on a stick" implementation with a PA-5060 performing inter-VLAN routing. All VLAN-tagged traffic will be forwarded to the PA-5060 through a single dot1q trunk interface.Which interface type and configuration setting will support this design?A. Trunk interface type with specified lagB. Layer 3 interface type with specified tagC. Layer 3 subinterface type with specified tagD. Layer 2 interface type with a VLAN assigned*Answer: CExplanation:The interface ethernet1/15 is configured as a layer 3 interface. Subinterfaces corresponding to each one of the VLAN are created off of the parent interface Ethernet 1/15. Each subinterface is assigned a VLAN tag and an IP address corresponding to the VLAN provides connectivity.Note: Inter VLAN routing with each VLAN in a unique IP subnet In order for network devices in different VLANs to communicate, a router must be used to route traffic between the VLANs. While VLANs help to control local traffic, if a device in one VLAN needs to communicate with a device in another VLAN, one or more routers must be used for inter VLAN communication. In this configuration a Palo Alto networks firewall can be used to securely route traffic within the VLAN. This is also commonly called "one arm routing" or "router on a stick".

B. The frame is re-transmitted as a multicast frame on all ports on the switch.
