NEW QUESTION: 1 Which tool creates a duplicate of a sampled area when you paint in another area? A. The Spot Healing Brush tool B. The Clone Stamp tool C. The Patch tool D. The Healing Brush tool Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 2 Refer to the exhibit. Why is R2 unable to ping the loopback interface of R4? A. The local preference is too high. B. The next hop is not reachable from R2. C. The weight is too low. D. The route originated from within the same AS. Answer: B Explanation:

Explanation/Reference: Explanation: Before a BGP speaker installs a route to a network in the main IP routing table, the router must know how to reach the next hop that is used to get to that network. Route reachability is verified by searching for a route to the next hop in the main IP routing table. Unlike IGP routing protocols, such as EIGRP and OSPF, which assume that a route is reachable if they learned it through a valid adjacency, BGP does not install routes that it cannot verify as reachable. If a route to the next hop for a BGP network is found in the main IP routing table, BGP assumes that the network is reachable, and that the particular BGP route might be stored in the main IP routing table. If the router receives a route to a network that is not reachable, that route continues to be stored in the incoming BGP table, adj-RIB-In, and might be seen using the show ip bgp command, but is not placed in the main IP routing table.
