NEW QUESTION: 1 A group of independent servers, which are managed as a single system, that provides higher availability, easier manageability, and greater scalability is: A. guest cluster. B. server cluster. C. client cluster. D. host cluster. Answer: B Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Explanation: A server cluster is a group of servers that are viewed logically as one server to users and can be managed as a single logical system. Clustering provides for availability and scalability. It groups physically different systems and combines them logically, which provides immunity to faults and improves performance. Incorrect Answers: B: A cluster contains servers, not clients. C: A guest cluster is referring to something more specific compared to a server cluster. For example, for Windows Server 2012, a failover cluster that is made up of two or more virtual machines is typically referred to as a guest cluster. D: A host cluster is a more specific notion compared to server cluster, specifically, it is a type of web hosting.
