NEW QUESTION: 4 A. a Microsoft Azure HDInsight Hadoop cluster B. a Microsoft Azure SQL data warehouse C. a Microsoft Azure HDInsight Storm cluster D. Microsoft Azure Table Storage E. a Microsoft SQL Server database Answer: B, D Explanation: A: Azure SQL Data Warehouse is a SQL-based, fully-managed, petabyte-scale cloud data warehouse. It's highly elastic, and it enables you to set up in minutes and scale capacity in seconds. Scale compute and storage independently, which allows you to burst compute for complex analytical workloads, or scale down your warehouse for archival scenarios, and pay based on what you're using instead of being locked into predefined cluster configurations-and get more cost efficiency versus traditional data warehouse solutions. E: Use Azure Table storage to store petabytes of semi-structured data and keep costs down. Unlike many data stores-on-premises or cloud-based-Table storage lets you scale up without having to manually shard your dataset. Perform OData-based queries.
