All domain controllers run Windows Server 2008 R2. Department managers use a sales reporting application on a server named SalesServer1 in the East domain. A domain local group named SalesAppEast in the East domain has access to the application. Each domain has a global group named LocalManagers that contains all managers from the corresponding domain. Configure the GPO to restrict group membership to the SalesAppEast group and link the GPO to the East domain.D. Create a Group Policy object (GPO). Configure the GPO to restrict group membership to the LocalManagers group and link the GPO to the North, South, and West domains.Answer: CExplanation:Explanation/Reference: To ensure that any unauthorized member added to LocEastGr is automatically removed, you need to create and configure the GPO to restrict group membership to the LocEastGr group and link the GPO to the East domain. A restricted group's membership is enforced by group policy. It allows you to clearly specify which accounts must not considered members of a client's local group, and which accounts must always be considered members of a local group. This way you can enforce rights and privileges for who gets to log onto a local client and who does not.You should not create and configure the GPO to restrict group membership to the global domain group because you want to configure LocEastGr for unauthorized access and not global domain groups.Reference: Using Group Policy to Restrict Group Membership <http://www.informit.com/guides/content.aspx?g=windowsserver&seqNum=68>
