NEW QUESTION: 2When evaluating projects breakeven time is best described as:A. The point where cumulative cash inflows on a project equal total cash outflows.B. The point at which discounted cumulative cash inflows on a project equal discounted total cash outflows.C. Project investment - annual net cash inflows.D. Annual fixed costs - monthly contribution margin.Answer: B*Explanation:Breakeven time is a capital budgeting tool that is widely used to evaluate the rapidity of new product development. It is the period required for the discounted cumulative cash inflows for a project to equal the discounted cumulative cash outflows. The concept is similar to the payback period, but it is more sophisticated because it incorporates the time value of money. It also differs from the payback method because the period covered begins at the outset of a project, not when the initial cash outflow occurs.
