NEW QUESTION: 4 How does the NameNode detect that a DataNode has failed?A. When HDFS starts up, the NameNode tries to communicate with the DataNode and considers the DataNode as failed if it does not respond.B. When the NameNode fails to receive periodic heartbeats from the DataNode, it considers the DataNode as failed.C. The NameNode does not need to know that a DataNode has failed.D. The NameNode periodically pings the datanode. If the DataNode does not respond, the NameNode considers the DataNode as failed.Answer: B*Explanation: NameNode periodically receives a Heartbeat and a Blockreport from each of the DataNodes in the cluster. Receipt of a Heartbeat implies that the DataNode is functioning properly. A Blockreport contains a list of all blocks on a DataNode. When NameNode notices that it has not received a heartbeat message from a data node after a certain amount of time, the data node is marked as dead. Since blocks will be under replicated the system begins replicating the blocks that were stored on the dead datanode. The NameNode Orchestrates the replication of data blocks from one datanode to another. The replication data transfer happens directly between datanodes and the data never passes through the namenode.Reference: 24 Interview Questions & Answers for Hadoop MapReduce developers, How NameNode Handles data node failures?
