NEW QUESTION: 1At her first prenatal visit, a 21-year-old woman who is gravida 2, para 0, ab 1, is currently at 32 weeks' gestation and has a history of drug abuse, smoking, and occasional ethyl alcohol use. Fetal ultrasound tests indicate poor fetal growth. The most likely reason for the infant's intrauterine growth retardation is:A. The client's previous abortionB. The client's history of drug, ethyl alcohol, and tobacco useC. The client's late prenatal careD. The client's young ageAnswer: BExplanation:Explanation/Reference:Explanation:(A) Although adolescents frequently have a higher incidence of low-birth-weight infants, this client is 21 years old. (B) Uncomplicated induced abortions have not been proved to influence the growth of infants of subsequent pregnancies. (C) Compounds in cigarettes and some illicit drugs cause maternal vasoconstriction and a subsequent reduction in O2 availability for the fetus owing to the resulting reduction in uteroplacental blood flow. As few as one or two drinks of alcohol per day will decrease birth weight. (D) Although early prenatal care has been shown to improve pregnancy outcomes, not seeking care until the second week of gestation does not, in and of itself, cause intrauterine growth retardation.

NEW QUESTION: 2Decomposition is a technique used to break larger, complex items into smaller and more manageable items. Which following statement best describes the role decomposition plays in creating the WBS?A. Final output of creating the WBS is described in terms of schedule activities.B. Final output of creating the WBS is described in terms of phases of a project life cycle.C. Final output of creating the WBS is described in terms of the scope of the project.D. Final output of creating the WBS is described in terms of verifiable products, services, or results.Answer: DExplanation:Explanation/Reference:Explanation:By using decomposition, the upper-level WBS components are subdivided for the work for each of the deliverables or subcomponents into its most fundamental elements, where the WBS components then represent verifiable products, service, or results.
