NEW QUESTION: 1 Which of the following is true of biometrics? A. It is used for authentication in physical controls and for identification in logical controls. B. Biometrics has no role in logical controls. C. It is used for identification in physical controls and it is not used in logical controls. D. It is used for identification in physical controls and for authentication in logical controls.

Answer: D Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Explanation: Biometrics is used for identification in physical controls and for authentication in logical controls. Physical controls are items put into place to protect facility, personnel, and resources. As a physical control, biometrics provides protection by identifying a person to see if that person is authorized to access a facility. When a user is identified and granted physical access to a facility, biometrics can be used for authentication in logical controls to provide access to resources. Controls are put into place to reduce the risk an organization faces, and they come in three main flavors: administrative, technical, and physical. Administrative controls are commonly referred to as "soft controls" because they are more management-oriented. Examples of administrative controls are security documentation, risk management, personnel security, and training. Technical controls (also called logical controls) are software or hardware components, as in firewalls, IDS, encryption, identification and authentication mechanisms. And physical controls are items put into place to protect facility, personnel, and resources. Examples of physical controls are security guards, locks, fencing, and lighting. Incorrect Answers: A: Biometrics is used in logical controls. B: Biometrics is used for identification in physical controls and for authentication in logical controls, not the other way round. Biometrics is used first as a physical control to identify a person to grant access to a facility, and then as a logical control to authenticate the user to provide access to resources. D: Biometrics does have a role in logical controls.
