NEW QUESTION: 1The application systems of an organization using open-source software have no single recognized developer producing patches. Which of the following would be the MOST secure way of updating open-source software?A. Develop in-house patchesB. Rewrite the patches and apply themC. identify and test suitable patches before applying themD. Code review and application of available patchesAnswer: C*Explanation:Suitable patches from the existing developers should be selected and tested before applying them.Rewriting the patches and applying them is not a correct answer because it would require skilled resources and time to rewrite the patches. Code review could be possible but tests need to be performed before applying the patches. Since the system was developed outside the organization, the IT department may not have the necessary skills and resources to develop patches.
