Explanation: Suppose your company produces roofing shingles. You have a chart which shows housing starts which is the (independent variable) and shingle sales which is the (dependent) variable. The usage of shingles can be attributed to housing starts. In forecasting the last squares/regression model would BEST fit your analysis. The Box-Jenkins model involves lag and shift measures and uses auto-regressive integrated moving average (ARIMA). Future sales based on past sales is a life cycle analogy and the winters model is a trend adjusted model using gamma.
