NEW QUESTION: 1A. Option AB. Option BC. Option CD. Option D Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 2A. Option AB. Option BC. Option CD. Option D Answer: D Explanation: Explanation Different software vendors have different methods of identifying a computer used to activate software. However, a common component used in software activations is a hardware key (or hardware and software key). This key is a hash value generated based on the hardware (and possibly software) installed on the system. For example, when Microsoft software is activated on a computer, the software generates an installation ID that consists of the software product key used during the installation and a hardware key (hash value generated from the computer's hardware). The installation ID is submitted to Microsoft for software activation. Changing the hardware on a system can change the hash key which makes the software think it is installed on another computer and is therefore not activated for use on that computer. This is most likely what happened in this question.

NEW QUESTION: 3 Refer to the Exhibits. The SIP call flow made from an Avaya Communicator Remote Worker is on the left, and the call flow made from a 96X1 telephone Remote Worker is on the right. When comparing the two call flows, which statement is true? A. The Communicator does not register to Avaya Aura Session Manager. B. Avaya Aura Communication Manager does full call model processing for the SIP-to-SIP call flow and does half-call model processing for the SIP-to-Communicator call flow. C. There is no difference between the two. D. The Communicator registers to Avaya Session Border Controller for Enterprise (SBCE). Answer: C
