How does the HP StoreOnce 6200 Backup System respond to this customer's requirements?A. by supporting more than 32 concurrent data streams to a single VTL or NAS share deviceB. by requiring a smaller volume of seeding data to be sent over a WAN link than previous StoreOnce D2D modelsC. by providing built-in low-bandwidth replication for cost-effective copies of data offsiteD. by supporting a single fabric with dual switches where the drives are presented to a single port for no single point of failureAnswer: C

The HP B6200 StoreOnce Backup System responds to all these requirements by providing:
*Deduplication to drive more efficient storage of data
*Large device scalability to ensure every backup has access to devices and, so, reduce queuing time
(D) In-built low bandwidth replication for cost-effective copies of data offsite as part of a Disaster Recovery plan
*HP Autonomic failover (with appropriate ISV software) to allow backups to continue, even if a node in an HP B6200 StoreOnce Backup System fails.
