Answer: B Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Explanation: For a frequency distribution, the estimated probability of a particular class/event occurring equals the relative frequency of that class. Now, the number of stocks that had either a negative return or a return more than 20% equals $129 + 301 + 173 = 603$. The total number of stocks equals $129 + 301 + 636 + 274 + 173 = 1513$. Therefore, the estimated probability of a randomly selected stock having either a negative return or a return more than 20% equals $603/1513 = 0.40$.
