NEW QUESTION: 2Mathew ascended three flights of stairs--passed half-way down a long arched gallery--and knocked at another old-fashioned oak door. This time the signal was answered. A low, clear, sweet voice, inside the room, inquired who was waiting without? In a few hasty words Mathew told his errand. Before he had done speaking the door was quietly and quickly opened, and Sarah Leeson confronted him on the threshold, with her candle in her hand. Not tall, not handsome, not in her first youth--shy and irresolute in manner--simple in dress to the utmost limits of plainness--the lady's-maid, in spite of all these disadvantages, was a woman whom it was impossible to look at without a feeling of curiosity, if not of interest. Few men, at first sight of her, could have resisted the desire to find out who she was; few would have been satisfied with receiving for answer, She is Mrs. Treverton's maid; few would have refrained from the attempt to extract some secret information for themselves from her face and manner; and none, not even the most patient and practiced of observers, could have succeeded in discovering more than that she must have passed through the ordeal of some great suffering at some former period of her life. Much in her manner, and more in her face, said plainly and sadly: I am the wreck of something that you might once have liked to see; a wreck that can never be repaired--that must drift on through life unnoticed, unguided, unpitied--drift till the fatal shore is touched, and the waves of Time have swallowed up these broken relics of me forever. This was the story that was told in Sarah Leeson's face--this, and no more. No two men interpreting that story for themselves, would probably have agreed on the nature of the suffering which this woman had undergone. It was hard to say, at the outset, whether the past pain that had set its ineffaceable mark on her had been pain of the body or pain of the mind. But whatever the nature of the affliction she had suffered, the traces it had left were deeply and strikingly visible in every part of her face. Her cheeks had lost their roundness and their natural color; her lips, singularly flexible in movement and delicate in form, had faded to an unhealthy paleness; her eyes, large and black and overshadowed by unusually thick lashes, had contracted an anxious startled look, which never left them and which piteously expressed the painful acuteness of her sensibility, the inherent timidity of her disposition. So far, the marks which sorrow or sickness had set on her were the marks common to most victims of mental or physical suffering. The one extraordinary personal deterioration which she had undergone consisted in the unnatural change that had passed over the color of her hair. It was as thick and soft, it grew as gracefully, as the hair of a young girl; but it was as gray as the hair of an old woman. It seemed to contradict, in the most startling manner, every personal assertion of youth that still existed in her face. With all its haggardness and paleness, no one could have looked at it and supposed for a moment that it was the face of an elderly woman. Wan as they might be, there was not a wrinkle in her cheeks. Her eyes, viewed apart from their prevailing expression of uneasiness and timidity, still preserved that bright, clear moisture which is never seen in the eyes of the old. The skin about her temples was as delicately smooth as the skin of a child. These and other physical signs which never mislead, showed that she was still, as to years, in the very prime of her life. Sickly and sorrow-stricken as she was, she looked, from the eyes downward, a woman who had barely reached thirty years of age. From the eyes upward, the effect of her abundant gray hair, seen in connection with her face, was not simply incongruous--it was absolutely startling; so startling as to make it no paradox to say that she would have looked most natural, most like herself if her hair had been dyed. In her case, Art would have seemed to be the truth, because Nature looked like falsehood. What shock had stricken her hair, in the very maturity of its luxuriance, with the hue of an unnatural old age? Was it a serious illness, or a dreadful grief that had turned her gray in the prime of her womanhood? That question had often been agitated among her fellow-servants, who were all struck by the peculiarities of her personal appearance, and rendered a little suspicious of her, as well, by an inveterate habit that she had of talking to herself. Inquire as they might, however, their curiosity was always baffled. Nothing more could be discovered than that Sarah Leeson was, in the common phrase, touchy on the subject of her gray hair and her habit of talking to herself, and that Sarah Leeson's mistress had long since forbidden every one, from her husband downward, to ruffle her maid's tranquility by inquisitive questions. Why does the author end paragraph four with "But whatever. . . visible in every part of her face"? A. to reaffirm to the reader that there was massive damage that was immediately noticeable B. to impart that there was nowhere on her face you could not see the pain C. to summate the previous writing in the passage to this point D. to introduce the subject matter for the next paragraph E. to indicate to the reader just how significant the damage to her face was Answer: D Explanation: Explanation/Reference: The author uses the last line of the preceding paragraph to introduce the topic of the entire next paragraph where he describes, in minute detail, each mark left by the mysterious pain.

NEW QUESTION: 3A. Option A B. Option B C. Option C D. Option D E. Option E Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 4 SZENARIO Bitte verwenden Sie Folgendes, um die nächste Frage zu beantworten: Aufgrund der schnell wachsenden Belegschaft hat Unternehmen A beschlossen, seine Lohn- und Gehaltsabrechnungsfunktion an Unternehmen B auszulagern. Unternehmen B ist ein etablierter Lohn- und Gehaltsabrechnungsdienstleister mit einem beträchtlichen Kundenstamm und einem soliden Ruf in der Branche. Die Lohn- und Gehaltsabrechnungslösung von Unternehmen B für Unternehmen A basiert auf der Erfassung von Zeit- und Anwesenheitsdaten, die über ein biometrisches Eingabesystem abgerufen werden, das in jedem Werk von Unternehmen A installiert ist. Unternehmen B speichert selbst keine biometrischen Daten, die zugehörigen Daten werden jedoch auf die britischen Server von Unternehmen B hochgeladen und zur Bereitstellung des Gehaltsabrechnungsdienstes verwendet. Die Live-Systeme von Unternehmen B enthalten die folgenden Informationen für jeden Mitarbeiter von Unternehmen A: Name Adresse Geburtsdatum Abrechnungsnummer Nationalversicherungsnummer Krankengeldanspruch Anspruch auf Mutterschafts- / Vaterschaftsgeld Urlaubsanspruch Renten- und Leistungsbeiträge Gewerkschaftsbeiträge Jenny ist der Compliance-Beauftragte bei Unternehmen A. Sie prüft zunächst, ob Unternehmen A eine Datenschutz-Folgenabschätzung in Bezug auf das neue Zeiterfassungssystem durchführen muss, ist sich jedoch nicht sicher, ob dies erforderlich ist oder nicht. Jenny weiß jedoch, dass es gemäß der DSGVO eine formelle schriftliche Vereinbarung geben muss, wonach Unternehmen B die Zeit- und Anwesenheitsdaten nur zum Zweck der Bereitstellung des Gehaltsabrechnungsdienstes verwenden und geeignete technische und organisatorische Sicherheitsmaßnahmen zum Schutz der Daten anwenden muss. Jenny schlägt vor, dass Unternehmen B sich von seinem Datenschutzbeauftragten beraten lässt. Das Unternehmen hat keinen Datenschutzbeauftragten, verpflichtet sich jedoch im Interesse des Vertragsabschlusses, die Bestimmungen vollständig zu unterzeichnen. Firma A schließt den Vertrag ab. Wochen später, während Unternehmen B noch unter Vertrag mit Unternehmen A steht, startet es ein separates Projekt, um die Funktionalität seines Gehaltsabrechnungsdienstes zu verbessern, und beauftragt Unternehmen C mit der Unterstützung. Unternehmen C verpflichtet sich, alle personenbezogenen Daten aus den Live-Systemen von Unternehmen B zu extrahieren, um eine neue Datenbank für Unternehmen B zu erstellen. Diese Datenbank wird in einer Testumgebung gespeichert, die auf dem US-Server von Unternehmen C gehostet wird. Die beiden Unternehmen vereinbaren, keine Datenverarbeitungsbestimmungen in ihren Servicevertrag aufzunehmen, da die Daten nur für IT-Testzwecke verwendet werden. Leider ist der US-Server von Unternehmen C nur durch ein veraltetes IT-Sicherheitssystem geschützt und erleidet kurz nach Beginn der Arbeit an dem Projekt einen Cybersicherheitsvorfall. Infolgedessen sind Daten zu den Mitarbeitern von Unternehmen A für jeden sichtbar, der die Website von Unternehmen C besucht. Unternehmen A ist sich dessen nicht bewusst, bis Jenny im Zusammenhang mit der anschließenden Untersuchung ein Schreiben der Aufsichtsbehörde erhält. Sobald Jenny auf den Verstoß aufmerksam gemacht wird, benachrichtigt sie alle betroffenen Mitarbeiter. Die DSGVO verlangt ausreichende Garantien für die Fähigkeit eines Unternehmens, angemessene technische und organisatorische Maßnahmen umzusetzen. Was wäre der realistischste Weg, auf dem Unternehmen B diese Anforderung hätte erfüllen können? A. Überprüfung der Maßnahmen der Unternehmen bei der zuständigen Aufsichtsbehörde. B. Anfordern von Rat und technischer Unterstützung durch das IT-Team von Unternehmen A. C. Einstellung von Unternehmen, deren Maßnahmen den Empfehlungen der Akkreditierungsstellen entsprechen. D. Vermeiden Sie die Verwendung der Daten eines anderen Unternehmens zur Verbesserung der eigenen Dienste.
