NEW QUESTION: 1Which of the following stores user preferences related to a Web site?A. MAC addressB. Local User profileC. CookieD. SSIDAnswer: C*Explanation:A cookie is a small bit of text that accompanies requests and pages as they move between Web servers and browsers. It contains information that is read by a Web application, whenever a user visits a site. Cookies are stored in the memory or hard disk of client computers. A Web site stores information, such as user preferences and settings in a cookie. This information helps in providing customized services to users. There is absolutely no way a Web server can access any private information about a user or his computer through cookies, unless a user provides the information. A Web server cannot access cookies created by other Web servers. Answer option B is incorrect. SSID stands for Service Set Identifier. It is used to identify a wireless network. SSIDs are case sensitive text strings and have a maximum length of 32 characters. All wireless devices on a wireless network must have the same SSID in order to communicate with each other. The SSID on computers and the devices in WLAN can be set manually or automatically. Answer option D is incorrect. Media Access Control (MAC) address is a unique 48-bit address assigned to the network interface card (NIC) by the NIC manuurer. This physical address assigned to NIC is used for mapping in TCP/IP network communication. Answer option C is incorrect. Local user profile does not contain user preferences related to a Web site.
