NEW QUESTION: 4A set of CSV files contains sales records. All the CSV files have the same data schema. Each CSV file contains the sales record for a particular month and has the filename sales.csv. Each file is stored in a folder that indicates the month and year when the data was recorded. The folders are in an Azure blob container for which a datastore has been defined in an Azure Machine Learning workspace. The folders are organized in a parent folder named sales to create the following hierarchical structure: At the end of each month, a new folder with that month's sales file is added to the sales folder. You plan to use the sales data to train a machine learning model based on the following requirements: * You must define a dataset that loads all of the sales data to date into a structure that can be easily converted to a dataframe. * You must be able to create experiments that use only data that was created before a specific previous month, ignoring any data that was added after that month. * You must register the minimum number of datasets possible. You need to register the sales data as a dataset in Azure Machine Learning service workspace. What should you do? A. Create a tabular dataset that references the datastore and explicitly specifies each 'sales/mm-yyyy/ sales.csv' file. Register the dataset with the name each month as a new version and with a tag named month indicating the month and year it was registered. Use this dataset for all experiments, identifying the version to be used based on the B. Create a tabular dataset that references the datastore and specifies the path 'sales/*/sales.csv', register the dataset with the name sales_dataset and a tag named month indicating the month and year it was registered, and use this dataset for all experiments. C. Create a new tabular dataset that references the datastore and explicitly specifies each 'sales/mm-yyyy/ sales.csv' file every month. Register the dataset with the name sales_dataset_MM-YYYY each month with appropriate MM and YYYY values for the month and year. Use the appropriate month-specific dataset for experiments. D. Create a tabular dataset that references the datastore and explicitly specifies each 'sales/mm-yyyy/ sales.csv' file every month. Register the dataset with the name sales_dataset each month, replacing the existing dataset and specifying a tag named month indicating the month and year it was registered. Use this dataset for all experiments. Answer: B Explanation: Explanation Specify the path. Example: The following code gets the workspace existing workspace and the desired datastore by name. And then passes the datastore and file locations to the path parameter to create a new TabularDataset, weather_ds.

from azureml.core import Workspace, Datastore, Dataset datastore_name = 'your datastore name' workspace = Workspace.from_config() datastore = Datastore.get(workspace, datastore_name) datastore_paths = [(datastore, 'weather/2018/11.csv'), (datastore, 'weather/2018/12.csv'), (datastore, 'weather/2019/*.csv')] weather_ds = Dataset.Tabular.from_delimited_files(path=datastore_paths)
