The TCA flag is set by the upstream bridge to tell the downstream bridges to stop sending TCN BPDUs. Automatically Responding to Events One of the most useful ways to use Task Scheduler is to launch a task in response to a specific event type that appears in Event Viewer. You can respond to events in three ways: Start A Program - Launches an application. Often, administrators write a script that carries out a series of tasks that they would otherwise need to manually perform, and automatically run that script when an event appears. Send An E-mail - Sends an email by using the Simple Mail Transport Protocol (SMTP) server you specify. Often, administrators configure urgent events to be sent to a mobile device. Display A Message - Displays a dialog box showing a message. This is typically useful only when a user needs to be notified of something happening on the computer. To trigger a task when an event occurs, follow one of these three procedures: Find an example of the event in Event Viewer. Then, right-click the event and click Attach Task To This Event. A wizard will guide you through the process.
