NEW QUESTION: 1Which of the following data types will allow the following code snippet to compile?A. doubleB. intC. floatD. byteE. long*Answer: A,C*Explanation:Option B and D are the correct answer.Since the variables l and j are floats, resultant will be float type too. So we have to use float primitive type which can hold float, such a primitive type is double, it has wider rangeand also can hold floating point numbers, hence we can use double or float for the blank. As explained above options B and D are correct.long and int can't be used with floating point numbers so option A is incorrect.Option E is incorrect as it have smaller range and also can't be used with floating pointnumbers.
