NEW QUESTION: 2Refer to the exhibit. Autonomous systems 200 and 300 have EBGP sessions established with their directly connected routers in autonomous system 100. IGP has been configured on all routers in autonomous system 100 and they successfully exchange routing updates. Traffic originated in autonomous system 200 cannot reach the destination autonomous system 300. What configuration should be done on the routers in autonomous system 100 in order for the traffic coming from autonomous system 200 to be forwarded to autonomous system 300?A. IBGP session must be established between routers R1 R2 and R2 R3, and the synchronization must be turned on.B. IBGP session must be established between routers R1 and R3, and the synchronization must be turned on.C. IBGP session must be established between routers R1 and R3, and the synchronization must be turned off.D. IBGP speakers within autonomous 100 must be fully meshed, and the synchronization must be turned off.E. IBGP speakers within autonomous 100 must be fully meshed, and the synchronization must be turned on.F. IBGP session must be established between routers R1 R2 and R2 R3, and the synchronization must be turned off.Answer: D*Explanation:Explanation The synchronization rule states that if an AS provides transit service to another AS, BGP should not advertise a route until all of the routers within the AS have learned about the route via an IGP. To understand why this rule exists, let's take an example if this rule is not there. Suppose Rt-A wants RT-B to access its local LAN 1.1.1.0, so it advertises this network through R1. R1 and R3 are running IBGP so R1 sends this update to R3 through R2 (using the next-hopself to use its own interface's IP address). In turn, R3 announces to RT-B that it can reach 1.1.1.0 via R3. Now RT-B really wants to send traffic to 1.1.1.0 so it will send to R3. R3 does a look up and sees that the network can be reachable via R1. It then does a lookup for R1's IP address and sees that it is reachable via R2 -> so it forwards packets to R2. But R2, running IGP (like OSPF), does not find an entry for 1.1.1.0 so R2 drops all the packets for that network - a black-hole is created! That is why the BGP synchronization rule is born. With this rule, when R3 receives an advertisement for 1.1.1.0 from R1, it adds that route to its BGP table and before sending advertisement to RT-B, it first checks its IGP routing table to see whether an entry exists for that route. In this example, R3's IGP routing table does not know how to reach 1.1.1.0 so R3 will not advertise this network to RT-B. This route is only advertised to RT-B when IGP makes an entry in the routing table for 1.1.1.0. Well, now you understand the importance of BGP Synchronization rule but now I wish to explain why this rule causes trouble in fully-meshed IBGP! Synchronization prevents fully-meshed IBGP from working properly. Because no IGP is running so R3 cannot advertise any route to RT-B even if no black-hole exists in this topology. Note: A "fully-meshed" can be a physical fully-meshed topology or a topology where all routers in the same AS established IBGP connections with each other (although they do not need to be directly connected). So in the topology above, the connection between R1 & R3 is represented by a dashed line, which means it can be physically connected or not (but an IBGP connection must be established on both routers). Therefore if all routers in AS 100 is fully-meshed, the synchronization rule must be turned off.

NEW QUESTION: 3 Your company has an Active Directory Rights Management Services (AD RMS) server. Users have Windows Vista computers. An Active Directory domain is configured at the Windows Server 2003 functional level. You need to configure AD RMS so that users are able to protect their documents. What should you do? A. Upgrade the Active Directory domain to the functional level of Windows Server 2008. B. Add the RMS service account to the local administrators group on the AD RMS server. C. Establish an e-mail account in Active Directory Domain Services (AD DS) for each RMS user. D. Install the AD RMS client 2.0 on each client computer. Answer: C Explanation:

<http://technet.microsoft.com/en-us/library/cc753531%28v=ws.10%29.aspx> AD RMS Step-by-Step Guide For each user account and group that you configure with AD RMS, you need to add an e-mail address and then assign the users to groups.

NEW QUESTION: 4 HOTSPOT You need to develop a Transact-SQL statement that meets the following requirements: -The statement must return a custom error when there are problems updating a table. -The error number must be value 50555. -The error severity level must be 14. -A Microsoft SQL Server alert must be triggered when the error condition occurs. Which Transact-SQL segment should you use for each requirement? To answer, select the appropriate Transact-SQL segments in the answer area. Answer: Explanation: Box 1: TRY...CATCH The TRY...CATCH Transact-SQL construct implements error handling for Transact-SQL that is similar to the exception handling in the Microsoft Visual C# and Microsoft Visual C++ languages. A group of Transact-SQL statements can be enclosed in a TRY block. If an error occurs in the TRY block, control is passed to another group of statements that is enclosed in a CATCH block. Box 2: RAISERROR(50555, 14, 1 'The update failed.') WITH LOG We must use RAISERROR to be able to specify the required severity level of 14, and we should also use the LOG option, which logs the error in the error log and the application log for the instance of the Microsoft SQL Server Database Engine, as this enables a MS SQL SERVER alert to be triggered. Note: RAISERROR generates an error message and initiates error processing for the session. RAISERROR can either reference a user-defined message stored in the sys.messages catalog view or build a message dynamically. The message is returned as a server error message to the calling application or to an associated CATCH block of a TRY...CATCH construct.
