NEW QUESTION: 3HOTSPOTYou are developing a SQL Server Integration Services (SSIS) package. The package must run a parameterized query against a Windows Azure SQL Database database. You need to use the least amount of development effort to meet the package requirement. Which task should you use? (To answer, select the appropriate task in the answer area.) Answer: Explanation: Explanation: Running Parameterized SQL Commands SQL statements and stored procedures frequently use input parameters, output parameters, and return codes. The Execute SQL task supports the Input, Output, and ReturnValue parameter types. You use the Input type for input parameters, Output for output parameters, and ReturnValue for return codes. Ref: <http://msdn.microsoft.com/en-us/library/ms141003.aspx> In SSIS there are two tasks that can be used to execute SQL statements: Execute T-SQL Statement and Execute SQL. What is the difference between the two? The Execute T-SQL Statement task tasks less memory, parse time, and CPU time than the Execute SQL task, but is not as flexible. If you need to run parameterized queries, save the query results to variables, or use property expressions, you should use the Execute SQL task instead of the Execute T-SQL Statement task.
