NEW QUESTION: 4DRAG DROPYou plan to deploy two stored procedures named SP1 and SP2 that read data from the database.Your company identifies the following requirements for each stored procedure:* SP1 must allow dirty reads.* SP2 must place range locks on the data to ensure read consistency.You need to identify which isolation level you must set for each stored procedure. The solution must minimize the number of locks.Which isolation level should you identify?To answer, drag the appropriate isolation level to the correct stored procedure in the answer area. (Answer choices may be used once, more than once, or not at all.)Answer: Explanation:Explanation:Note:* READ UNCOMMITTEDSpecifies that statements can read rows that have been modified by other transactions but not yet committed.Transactions running at the READ UNCOMMITTED level do not issue shared locks to prevent other transactions from modifying data read by the current transaction. READUNCOMMITTED transactions are also not blocked by exclusive locks that would prevent the current transaction from reading rows that have been modified but not committed by other transactions. When this option is set, it is possible to read uncommitted modifications, which are called dirty reads. Values in the data can be changed and rows can appear or disappear in the data set before the end of the transaction. This option has the same effect as setting NOLOCK on all tables in all SELECT statements in a transaction. This is the least restrictive of the isolation levels.* SERIALIZABLE Specifies the following:Statements cannot read data that has been modified but not yet committed by other transactions.No other transactions can modify data that has been read by the current transaction until the current transaction completes. Other transactions cannot insert new rows with key values that would fall in the range of keys read by any statements in the current transaction until the current transaction completes. Range locks are placed in the range of key values that match the search conditions of each statement executed in a transaction. This blocks other transactions from updating or inserting any rows that would qualify for any of the statements executed by the current transaction. This means that if any of the statements in a transaction are executed a second time, they will read the same set of rows. The range locks are held until the transaction completes. This is the most restrictive of the isolation levels because it locks entire ranges of keys and holds the locks until the transaction completes. Because concurrency is lower, use this option only when necessary.
