(Select TWO). A. Penetration testing B. Black box testing C. Application sandboxing D. Static code analysis E. Memory dumping F. Manual code review Answer: D, F Explanation: A Code review refers to the examination of an application (the new network based software product in this case) that is designed to identify and assess threats to the organization. Application code review - whether manual or static will reveal the type of security weakness as shown in the exhibit. Incorrect Answers: B: Memory dumping is a penetration test. Applications work by storing information such as sensitive data, passwords, user names and encryption keys in the memory. Conducting memory dumping will allow you to analyze the memory content. You already have the memory content that you require in this case. D: Application Sandboxing is aimed at detecting malware code by running it in a computer-based system to analyze it for behavior and traits that indicates malware. Application sandboxing refers to the process of writing files to a temporary storage area (the so-called sandbox) so that you limit the ability of possible malicious code to execute on your computer. E: Penetration testing is designed to simulate an attack. This is not what is required in this case. F: Black box testing is used when the security team is provided with no knowledge of the system, network, or application. In this case the code of the application is already available.
