NEW QUESTION: 2An organization requires that all new managers must complete the first six months of their assignment traveling to different geographical locales. Female employees feel that this requirement restricts them from management positions because they have family obligations that would prevent them from traveling. The requirement to travel for six months is likely an example of what type of discrimination in this instance?A. Political requirementB. Disparate impactC. Sexual harassmentD. Disparate treatmentAnswer: BExplanation: Explanation/Reference:Answer option A is correct.The requirement to travel could be an example of disparate impact, as the requirements could screen out or prevent females with family obligations from traveling.Answer option D is incorrect. Disparate treatment occurs when a member of a protected class is intentionally treated differently than other employees. Answer option C is incorrect. This isn't an example of sexual harassment, as there is not a sexual advance being discussed in the question.Answer option B is incorrect. This is a distracter for the question, and it is not a valid answer or term for the SHRP.Reference: Professional in Human Resources Certification Study Guide, Sybex, ISBN: 978-0-470-43096-5.Chapter Four: Workforce Planning.
