Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 3You have a server that runs the Terminal Services Gateway (TS Gateway) role service. Users need to connect remotely through the gateway to desktop computers located in their offices. You create a security group named Remote1 for the users who need to connect to computers in their offices. You need to enable the users to connect to the TS Gateway. What should you do?
A. Create a resource authorization policy. Add the Remote1 security group and enable Users to connect to any resource.
B. Create a Group Policy object and enable the Set TS Gateway authentication method properties to Ask for credentials, use Basic protocol. Apply the policy to the TS Gateway server.
C. Create a client authorization policy. Add the Remote1 security group and enable Device redirection.
D. Add the Remote1 security group to the local remote desktop users group on the TS Gateway server.
Answer: C
Explanation: To enable the remote users belonging to RemoteUsersGrp1 to connect to the TS Gateway, you need to create a client authorization policy. Add the RemoteUsersGrp1 security group and enable Device redirection. A connection authorization policy (CAP) allows you to control who can connect to the Terminal Server through the Terminal Services Gateway. The Device Redirection gives you the option of disabling redirection for trusted a remote client devices. The tab contains a series of checkboxes that you can use to disable things like disk drives, the Windows clipboard, printers, serial ports, and even plug and play devices.
