NEW QUESTION: 1 Which of the following documents should be used to provide high-level reporting to key stakeholders? A. Statement of work B. Dashboard C. Project charter D. Communication plan Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 2 View the Exhibit and examine the structure of the CUSTOMERS table. Which two tasks would require subqueries or joins to be executed in a single statement? (Choose two.) A. listing of customers who do not have a credit limit and were born before 1980 B. finding the number of customers, in each city, whose marital status is 'married' C. finding the average credit limit of male customers residing in 'Tokyo' or 'Sydney' D. finding the number of customers, in each city, whose credit limit is more than the average credit limit of all the customers E. listing of those customers whose credit limit is the same as the credit limit of customers residing in the city 'Tokyo' Answer: D, E Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Explanation: Describe the Types of Problems That the Subqueries Can Solve There are many situations where you will need the result of one query as the input for another. Use of a Subquery Result Set for Comparison Purposes Which employees have a salary that is less than the average salary? This could be answered by two statements, or by a single statement with a subquery. The following example uses two statements: `select avg(salary) from employees; select last_name from employees where salary < result_of_previous_query ;` Alternatively, this example uses one statement with a subquery: `select last_name from employees where salary < (select avg(salary) from employees);` In this example, the subquery is used to substitute a value into the WHERE clause of the parent query: it is returning a single value, used for comparison with the rows retrieved by the parent query. The subquery could return a set of rows. For example, you could use the following to find all departments that do actually have one or more employees assigned to them: `select department_name from departments where department_id in(select distinct(department_id) from employees);`

NEW QUESTION: 3 Which three statements are correct about thread's sleep method? A. A thread can continue execution after the amount of time defined in the sleep (long) parameter B. A thread can continue execution before the amount of time defined in the sleep (long) parameter. C. The sleep (long) method parameter defines a delay in milliseconds. D. The sloop (long) method parameter defines a delay in microseconds. E. Only runtime exceptions are thrown by the sleep method.F. A thread loses all object monitors (lock flags) when calling the sleep method.G. A thread is guaranteed to continue execution after the exact amount of time defined in the sleep (long)parameter.Answer: A,C,GExplanation:Explanation/Reference: Explanation:sleep (long millis) not B Causes the currently executing thread to sleep (temporarily cease execution) for the specified number of milliseconds(A, not B) millis - the length of time to sleep in milliseconds.throws InterruptedException: - if another thread has interrupted the current thread. The interrupted status of the current thread is cleared when this exception is thrown.java.lang.Throwablejava.lang.Exceptionjava.lang.InterruptedExceptionThe thread does not lose ownership of any monitors. It means that if the thread has an object-monitor, all other threads that need that monitor are blocked.This method can be called regardless whether the thread has any monitor or not.
