NEW QUESTION: 2A. Which of the following statements are true about the campus area network? Each correct answer represents a complete solution. Choose all that apply.
B. In campus area network, similar hardware and networking technologies are used to interconnect corporate campuses.
C. It is used for communication among the personal devices
D. The reach of a CAN is typically a few meters.
E. It is considered a metropolitan area network specific to a campus setting.
Answer: B, E
Explanation: A campus area network (CAN) is a computer network that interconnects local area networks throughout a limited geographical area, such as a university campus, a corporate campus, or a military base. It could be considered a metropolitan area network that is specific to a campus setting. A campus area network is, therefore, larger than a local area network but smaller than a wide area network. The term is sometimes used to refer to university campuses, while the term corporate area network is used to refer to corporate campuses instead. Although not considered a wide area network, a CAN extends the reach of each local area network within the campus area of an organization. In a CAN, the buildings of a university or corporate campus are interconnected using the same types of hardware and networking technologies that one would use in a LAN. In addition, all of the components, including switches, routers, and cabling, as well as wireless connection points, are owned and maintained by the organization. Answer options A and C are incorrect. A personal area network (PAN) is a computer network used for communication among computer devices (including telephones and personal digital assistants) close to one's person. The reach of a PAN is typically a few meters. A PAN can be used for communication among the personal devices themselves (intrapersonal communication), or for connecting to a higher level network and the Internet.
