NEW QUESTION: 1You are a developer for a company that produces bug tracking software. The software runs on customer provisioned virtual machines (VMs) running in Azure, including deployments within private Azure Virtual Networks. The software has the following requirements for the runtime environment, if any of these components are missing or not configured correctly, the application will not function correctly. User groups named bug_users and bug_adminsa log file location at c:buglogsa registry key that contains the license keys Visual C++ runtime componentsa Windows service named BugCleanupYou need to provide a mechanism to distribute the application to customers that ensures that the application always functions correctly. What should you do?A. Provide a VM image to customers.B. Provide an Azure Resource Manager template to customers with an Azure PowerShell DSC script that installs the application and configures the VM.C. Convert the application to a ClickOnce application and distribute the URL of the application to customers.D. Provide an Azure Resource Manager template that contains logic to ensure application requirements are met.

Answer: DExplanation:You can deploy applications and services onto your Service Fabric cluster via Azure Resource Manager. This means that instead of deploying and managing applications via PowerShell or CLI after having to wait for the cluster to be ready, you can now express applications and services in JSON and deploy them in the same Resource Manager template as your cluster. The process of application registration, provisioning, and deployment all happens in one step. References:
