NEW QUESTION: 2You have a Windows Server 2008 R2 Enterprise Root CA. Security policy prevents port 443 and port 80 from being opened on domain controllers and on the issuing CA. You need to allow users to request certificates from a Web interface. You install the Active Directory Certificate Services (AD CS) server role. What should you do next?A. Configure the Online Responder Role Service on a member server.B. Configure the Certificate Enrollment Web Service role service on a member server.C. Configure the Certificate Enrollment Web Service role service on a domain controller.D. Configure the Online Responder Role Service on a domain controller.Answer: BExplanation:

<http://technet.microsoft.com/en-us/library/dd759209.aspx> Certificate Enrollment Web Service Overview The Certificate Enrollment Web Service is an Active Directory Certificate Services (AD CS) role service that enables users and computers to perform certificate enrollment by using the HTTPS protocol. Together with the Certificate Enrollment Policy Web Service, this enables policy-based certificate enrollment when the client computer is not a member of a domain or when a domain member is not connected to the domain. Personal note: Since domain controllers are off-limits (regarding open ports), you are left to install the Certificate Enrollment Web Service role service on a plain member server
