NEW QUESTION: 1What information can be used by a router running a link-state protocol to build and maintain its topological database? (Choose two.)
A. beacons received on point-to-point links
B. LSAs from other routers
C. routing tables received from other link-state routers
D. hello packets
E. TTL packets from designated routers
F. SAP messages sent by other routers
Answer: B, D Explanation: Explanation Reference 1:

<http://www.ciscopress.com/articles/article.asp?p=24090&seqNum=4> Link state protocols, sometimes called shortest path first or distributed database protocols, are built around a well-known algorithm from graph theory, E.W. Dijkstra's shortest path algorithm. Examples of link state routing protocols are: Open Shortest Path First (OSPF) for IP The ISO's Intermediate System to Intermediate System (IS-IS) for CLNS and IP DEC's DNA Phase V Novell's NetWare Link Services Protocol (NLSP) Although link state protocols are rightly considered more complex than distance vector protocols, the basic functionality is not complex at all:
1. Each router establishes a relationship-an adjacency-with each of its neighbors.
2. Each router sends link state advertisements (LSAs), some
3. Each router stores a copy of all the LSAs it has seen in a database. If all works well, the databases in all routers should be identical.
4. The completed topological database, also called the link state database, describes a graph of the internetwork. Using the Dijkstra algorithm, each router calculates the shortest path to each network and enters this information into the route table.
