The data entry application sends customer orders to a middle-tier server. The middle-tier server sends orders to a set of services that perform operations on the orders. Business rules determine which services to call and whether to run them in sequence or in parallel. The business rules are complex and data dependent. The Windows solution must meet the following requirements: - Optimize application performance by using dynamic load balancing. - Allow for business rules to be changed at runtime. You need to recommend an approach that meets the requirements. What should you recommend? A. SQL Server stored procedures B. A Windows Communication Foundation (WCF) service for each operation, with a controller class on the middle-tier server C. A routed service that uses Windows Communication Foundation (WCF) messaging D. Private message queues with a controller class on the middle-tier server Answer: C

Explanation: *Backup Issues Customers who have large amounts of historical purchase order data report that backup time is unacceptable. *For very large databases (and by that, I mean, at least 500gb, but more like 5-10tb or more), it can become too expensive to regularly run a straight full backup. So, where needed, you can choose to backup smaller pieces of the database by choosing to back up one of the files or file groups that make up a database.
