NEW QUESTION: 1What is the difference between Advisory and Regulatory security policies?A. Advisory policies are not mandated. Regulatory policies must be implemented.B. there is no difference between themC. Advisory policies are mandated while Regulatory policies are notD. regulatory policies are high level policy, while advisory policies are very detailedAnswer: A
Explanation:Explanation/Reference:Advisory policies are security polices that are not mandated to be followed but are strongly suggested, perhaps with serious consequences defined for failure to follow them (such as termination, a job action warning, and so forth). A company with such policies wants most employees to consider these policies mandatory. Most policies fall under this broad category. Advisory policies can have many exclusions or application levels. Thus, these policies can control some employees more than others, according to their roles and responsibilities within that organization. For example, a policy that requires a certain procedure for transaction processing might allow for an alternative procedure under certain, specified conditions. RegulatoryRegulatory policies are security policies that an organization must implement due to compliance, regulation, or other legal requirements. These companies might be financial institutions, public utilities, or some other type of organization that operates in the public interest. These policies are usually very detailed and are specific to the industry in which the organization operates. Regulatory polices commonly have two main purposes:1. To ensure that an organization is following the standard procedures or base practices of operation in its specific industry2. To give an organization the confidence that it is following the standard and accepted industry policy Informative Informative policies are policies that exist simply to inform the reader. There are no implied or specified requirements, and the audience for this information could be certain internal (within the organization) or external parties. This does not mean that the policies are authorized for public consumption but that they are general enough to be distributed to external parties (vendors accessing an extranet, for example) without a loss of confidentiality.References: KRUTZ, Ronald L. & VINES, Russel D., The CISSP Prep Guide: Mastering the Ten Domains of Computer Security, John Wiley & Sons, 2001, Page 12, Chapter 1: Security Management Practices.also see:The CISSP Prep Guide:Mastering the Ten Domains of Computer Security by Ronald L. NEW QUESTION: 3 Residco, Inc. expects net income of $800,000 for the next fiscal year. Its targeted and current capital structure is 40 percent debt and 60 percent common equity. The director of capital budgeting has determined that the optimal capital spending for next year is $1.2 million. Residco does not plan to issue any new common equity next year. If Residco follows a strict residual dividend policy, what is the expected dividend payout ratio for next year?A. 10.0 percent.B. 90.0 percent.C. 66.7 percent.D. 40.0 percent.Answer: A*Explanation: Choice "d" is correct. A strict dividend policy guides a company's management to pay no more (and no less) in dividends from net income to generate a change in equity that produces or maintains a targeted capital structure. The dividend pay out ratio is the ratio of dividends to income. The call of the question requires the calculation of the ratio of dividends to income assuming income, capital projects and capital structure amounts as follows: Assuming the company is in compliance with the 40/60 Debt/Equity capital structure to begin with, 60% of the $1,200,000 in capital projects will be financed by additions to equity the come from new earnings of $ 800,000. The equity funded portion of capital projects is $720,000 ( $$1,200,000 \times 60\%$ ). Following a strict residual dividend policy, the company will pay out the difference between is additions to equity ($800,000 in income) and the amounts reinvested in the business ($720,000). The dividend will be $80,000. ( $$800,000 - $720,000$ ). The dividend payout ratio is, therefore, 10% ( $$80,000$  in dividends/  $$800,000$  in income). Choices "a", "b", and "c" are incorrect, per the above calculation.
