NEW QUESTION: 1 Which two statements are true about index full scans? A. An index fast full scan reads the whole index from the lowest value to the higher value. B. An index fast full scan reads the index block by block. C. Index nodes are not retrieved in the index order, and therefore the nodes are not in sequence. D. An index fast full scan multi block I/O to read the index structure in its entirety. Answer: C, D Explanation: A: To speed table and index block access, Oracle uses the `db_file_multiblock_read_count` parameter (which defaults to 8) to aid in getting full-table scan and full-index scan data blocks into the data buffer cache as fast as possible. B: The index nodes are not retrieved in index order, the rows will not be sequenced. Note: there are some requirements for Oracle to invoke the fast full-index scan. - All of the columns required must be specified in the index. That is, all columns in the select and where clauses must exist in the index. - The query returns more than 10 percent of the rows within the index. This 10 percent figure depends on the degree of multi-block reads and the degree of parallelism. - You are counting the number of rows in a table that meet a specific criterion. The fast full-index scan is almost always used for `count(*)` operations. Reference: index fast full scan tips An application supplied by a new vendor is being deployed and the SQL statements have plan baselines provided by the supplier. The plans have been loaded from a SQL tuning set. You require the optimizer to use these baselines, but allow better plans to be used, should any be created.

NEW QUESTION: 2 A customer is configuring an upstream disjoint Layer 2 network in a Cisco UCS domain. So far they have configured the following: Fabric Interconnects are in switching mode. There is symmetrical configuration for high availability. There are no overlapping VLANs. Each vNIC is communicating with one disjoint Layer 2 network. After validating the above, the customer is still having issues with network connectivity. What is the issue? A. Asymmetrical configuration for high availability needs to be configured. B. The fabric interconnect must be in end-host mode for a disjoint Layer 2 network. C. Overlapping VLANs are allowed in a disjoint Layer 2 network. D. The vNIC configuration is incorrect and must communicate with two or more disjoint layer 2 networks. Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 3 What happens when you start the SAP HANA database?
