NEW QUESTION: 2You configured the Flash Recovery Area for your database. The database instance has been started in ARCHIVELOG mode and the LOG_ARCHIVE_DEST_1 parameter is not set.What will be the implications on the archiving and the location of archive redo log files?A. The database instance will shut down and the error details will be logged in the alert log file B. Archiving will be disabled because the destination for the redo log files is missingC. Archiving will be enabled and the destination for the archived redo log file will be set to the Flash Recovery Area implicitlyD. Archiving will be enabled and the location for the archive redo log file will be created in the default location $ORACLE_HOME/logAnswer: CExplanation: LOG_ARCHIVE_DEST_n The LOG_ARCHIVE_DEST_n parameters (where n = 1, 2, 3, ... 10) define up to ten archive log destinations. The parameter integer suffix is defined as the handle displayed by the V$ARCHIVE_DEST dynamic performance view. Values:SERVICE Specifies a standby destination. Oracle Net (IPC or TCP) transmits the archivelog. A standby instance must be associated with the destination. The value represented by tnsnames_service corresponds to an appropriate service name in tnsnames.ora. LOCATION Specifies a local file system destination. You must specify this parameter for at least one destination. MANDATORY Specifies that archiving to the destination must succeed before the redo log file can be made available for reuse. OPTIONAL Specifies that successful archiving to the destination is not required before the redo log file can be made available for reuse. If the "must succeed count," set with LOG_ARCHIVE_MIN_SUCCEED_DEST, is met, the redo logfile is marked for reuse. This is the default. REOPEN Specifies the minimum number of seconds before the archiver process (ARCn, foreground, or log writer process) should try again to access a previously failed destination. Future attempts are made when the next redo log file is archived. If a destination is MANDATORY, then Oracle recommends that you specify a REOPEN time that reduces the possibility of primary database shutdown due to lack of available online redo log files. If you do not specify seconds, then the default value is 300

NEW QUESTION: 3 The role of the certificate authority (CA) as a third party is to: A. confirm the identity of the entity owning a certificate issued by that CA. B. act as a trusted intermediary between two communication partners. C. provide secured communication and networking services based on certificates. D. host a repository of certificates with the corresponding public and secret keys issued by that CA. Answer: A Explanation: The primary activity of a CA is to issue certificates. The primary role of the CA is to check the identity of the entity owning a certificate and to confirm the integrity of any certificate it issued. Providing a communication infrastructure is not a CA activity. The secret keys belonging to the certificates would not be archived at the CA. The CA can contribute to authenticating the communicating partners to each other, but the CA is not involved in the communication stream itself.
