NEW QUESTION: 1 Which protocol, as a part of TLS, handles negotiating and establishing a connection between two parties?A. Negotiation*B. Handshake*C. Record*D. Binding*Answer: B
Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Explanation: The TLS handshake protocol is what negotiates and establishes the TLS connection between two parties and enables a secure communications channel to then handle data transmissions. The TLS record protocol is the actual secure communications method for transmitting data; it's responsible for the encryption and authentication of packets throughout their transmission between the parties, and in some cases it also performs compression. Negotiation and binding are not protocols under TLS.
