A. If a bridge assurance port fails to receive a BPDU after a timeout, the port is put into a blocking state. B. Bridge assurance is enabled on STP point-to-point links only. C. Bridge assurance can be enabled on one end of a link or on both ends. D. Bridge assurance must be enabled on both ends of a link. E. If a bridge assurance port fails to receive a BPDU after a timeout, the port is put into an error disabled state. F. Bridge assurance is enabled on STP multipoint links only.
Answer: A, B, D Explanation: Bridge Assurance is enabled by default and can only be disabled globally. Also, Bridge Assurance can be enabled only on spanning tree network ports that are point-to-point links. Finally, both ends of the link must have Bridge Assurance enabled. With Bridge Assurance enabled, BPDUs are sent out on all operational network ports, including alternate and backup ports, for each hello time period. If the port does not receive a BPDU for a specified period, the port moves into the blocking state and is not used in the root port calculation. Once that port receives a BPDU, it resumes the normal spanning tree transitions.
