NEW QUESTION: 1Which choice below most accurately reflects the goals of risk mitigation?A. Analyzing the effects of a business disruption and preparing the company's responseB. Defining the acceptable level of risk the organization can tolerate, and assigning any costs associated with loss or disruption to a third party, such as an insurance carrierC. Defining the acceptable level of risk the organization can tolerate, and reducing risk to that levelD. Analyzing and removing all vulnerabilities and threats to security within the organization
Answer: CExplanation:The correct answer is "Defining the acceptable level of risk the organization can tolerate, and reducing risk to that level ". The goal of risk mitigation is to reduce risk to a level acceptable to the organization. Therefore risk needs to be defined for the organization through risk analysis, business impact assessment, and/or vulnerability assessment. Answer "Analyzing and removing all vulnerabilities and threats to security within the organization" is not possible. Answer "Defining the acceptable level of risk the organization can tolerate, and assigning any costs associated with loss or disruption to a third party, such as an insurance carrier" is called risk transference. Answer "Analyzing the effects of a business disruption and preparing the company's response " is a distracter.
