NEW QUESTION: 3Your network contains an Active Directory domain. All client computers run Windows XP Service Pack 3 (SP3). The domain contains a member server named Server1 that runs Windows Server 2008 R2. On Server1, you create a connection security rule that requires authentication for inbound and outbound connections. You configure the connection security rule to use Kerberos authentication. You need to ensure that the client computers can connect to Server1. The solution must ensure that all connections to Server1 are encrypted. What should you do?
A. From the Windows Firewall with Advanced Security console, create an outbound rule on Server1.
B. From the Windows Firewall with Advanced Security console, create an inbound rule on Server1.
C. From a Group Policy object (GPO), enable the Client (Respond Only) IPsec policy on all client computers.
D. From a Group Policy object (GPO), configure the Network Security: LDAP client signing requirements policy setting for all client computers.
Answer: C
Explanation: You've created a rule that requires authentication, but have not configured clients with an IPsec policy to respond to these requests. So the simplest fix is obviously to deploy a Client (Respond Only) policy.
WRONG ANSWERS
LDAP client signing requirements: This security setting determines the level of data signing that is requested on behalf of clients issuing LDAP BIND requests

WFAS rules are for restricting packets to a server, not encrypting. Creating a connection security rule was the right, so we should be able to encrypt our connections if we configure everything right.
