NEW QUESTION: 2 For each of the following statements, select Yes if the statement is true. Otherwise, select No.NOTE: Each correct selection is worth one point.Answer: Explanation: Explanation:Box 1: No Azure firewall does not encrypt network traffic. It is used to block or allow traffic based on source/destination IP address, source/destination ports and protocol.Box 2: No A network security group does not encrypt network traffic. It works in a similar way to a firewall in that it is used to block or allow traffic based on source/destination IP address, source/destination ports and protocol.Box 3: No The question is rather vague as it would depend on the configuration of the host on the Internet. Windows Server does come with a VPN client and it also supports other encryption methods such as IPsec encryption or SSL/TLS so it could encrypt the traffic if the Internet host was configured to require or accept the encryption. However, the VM could not encrypt the traffic to an Internet host that is not configured to require the encryption.References:

Scripts can be run in three different ways: Device Database: By default, a script can be executed on the device database. It is recommended you run the changes on the device database (default setting), as this allows you to check what configuration changes you will send to the managed device. Once scripts are run on the device database you can then install these changes to a managed device using the installation wizard. Policy Package, ADOM database: A script can be run here to create ADOM level objects that will be applied to your managed devices and can then be installed using the installation wizard. Remote FortiGate Directly (via CLI): A script can be executed directly on the device and you don't need to install these changes using the installation wizard. As the changes are directly installed on the managed device, no option is provided to verify and check the configuration changes through FortiManager.
