NEW QUESTION: 3What is the preferred analog signaling method to reduce glare?A. on-hook*B. loop start*C. ground start*D. off-hook*Answer: C*Explanation:Loop-Start SignalingLoop-start signaling sends an off-hook signal that starts a call and an on-hook signal that closes the loop and ends the call. Loop-start trunks lack positive disconnect supervision, and users can experience glare when two calls seize the trunk at the same time.Ground-Start SignalingGround-start signaling provides current detection mechanisms at both ends of the trunk to detect off-hook signals. This mechanism permits endpoints to agree on which end is seizing the trunk before it is seized, and minimizes the chance of glare. Ground start provides positive recognition of connects and disconnects and is the preferred signaling method for PBX connections. Some PBXs do not support ground-start signaling, so then you must use loop-start signaling for the trunk interface.Link:
