NEW QUESTION: 2John works as a Network Administrator for NetPerfect Inc. The company has a Windows-based network. John has been assigned a project to build a network for the sales department of the company. It is important for the LAN to continue working even if there is a break in the cabling.Which of the following topologies should John use to accomplish the task?A. StarB. BusC. RingD. MeshAnswer: DExplanation:Mesh network topology is a type of physical network design where all devices in a network are connected to each other with many redundant connections. It provides multiple paths for the data traveling on the network to reach its destination. Mesh topology also provides redundancy in the network. It employs the full mesh and partial mesh methods to connect devices. In a full mesh topology network, each computer is connected to all the other computers. In a partial mesh topology network, some of the computers are connected to all the computers, whereas some are connected to only those computers with which they frequently exchange data.Mesh Topology:Answer option D is incorrect. Bus topology is a type of physical network design where all computers in the network are connected through a single coaxial cable known as bus. This topology uses minimum cabling and is therefore, the simplest and least expensive topology for small networks. In this topology, 50 ohm terminators terminate both ends of the network. A Bus topology network is difficult to troubleshoot, as a break or problem at any point along the cable can cause the entire network to go down. Bus Topology:Answer option A is incorrect. Star topology is a type of physical network design where each computer in the network is connected to a central device, called hub, through an unshielded twistedpair (UTP) wire. Signals from the sending computer go to the hub and are then transmitted to all the computers in the network. Since each workstation has a separate connection to the hub, it is easy to troubleshoot. Currently, it is the most popular topology used for networks.Star Topology:Answer option B is incorrect. Ring topology is a type of physical network design where all computers in the network are connected in a closed loop. Each computer or device in a Ring topology network acts as a repeater. It transmits data by passing a token around the network in order to prevent the collision of data between two computers that want to send messages at the same time. If a token is free, the computer waiting to send data takes it, attaches the data and destination address to the token, and sends it. When the token reaches its destination computer, the data is copied. Then, the token gets back to the originator. The originator finds that the message has been copied and received and removes the message from the token. Now, the token is free and can be used by the other computers in the network to send data In this topology, if one computer fails, the entire network goes down. Ring Topology:

NEW QUESTION: 3 Henry is the network manager at XYZ Corporation, a large manufacturing company that competes in the global market. The company's computing environment is extremely complex and includes several proprietary software systems, all of which require custom configuration of network devices to operate correctly. The company's executive management team believes that they can benefit by switching the company over to any cloud-based service. Henry disagrees. What is a disadvantage of cloud-based services that Henry can cite to support his position? A. The company must typically purchase additional servers to support connections to these types of cloud-based service providers. B. Cloud-based services are typically more limited in offerings and configurations than the company currently supports in-house. C. Cloud-based services are typically more costly than in-house solutions. D. Cloud-based services provide no maintenance or support. Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 4 Which of the following is a benefit of implementing the achievement-oriented leader approach rather than the directive leader approach? A. Employees have more opportunities to develop creativity and meet challenges. B. Employee development is enhanced. C. The structured environment allows employees to better achieve the organization's goals. D. Closer supervision is provided for employees who perform better in a structured work atmosphere. Answer: A Explanation: The benefits to the company of the achievement-oriented leader approach include greater employee confidence and commitment, more employee decision making, increased employee creativity, more challenging objectives, and reduced supervision for employees who work best independently.
