NEW QUESTION: 1Which of the following allows two computers to coordinate in executing software?A. NFSB. SNMP. RSHD. RPCAnswer: D
Explanation:Explanation/Reference:
Explanation:The programmer of a piece of software can write a function call that calls upon a subroutine. The subroutine could be local to the system or be on a remote system. If the subroutine is on a remote system, it is a Remote Procedure Call (RPC). The RPC request is carried over a session layer protocol. The result that the remote system provides is then returned to the requesting system over the same session layer protocol. With RPC a piece of software can execute components that reside on another system.Incorrect Answers:A: The remote shell (rsh) is a command line computer program that can execute shell commands as another user, and on another computer across a computer network. RSH is not used to remotely execute software.C: The Network File System (NFS) is not used to execute software remotely. NFS is a client/server application that lets a computer user view and optionally store and update file on a remote computer as though they were on the user's own computer.D: SNMP is used for monitoring the network, not for remote software execution.References:Harris, Shon, All In One CISSP Exam Guide, 6th Edition, McGraw-Hill, New York, 2013, p. 525
