NEW QUESTION: 3 Which two statements about the BGP community attribute are true? (Choose two.) A. A prefix can support only one community attribute. B. It is an optional transitive BGP attribute. C. Routers send the community attribute to all BGP neighbors automatically. D. A router can change a received community attribute before advertising it to peers. E. It is a well-known, discretionary BGP attribute. Answer: B, D Explanation: A community is a group of prefixes that share some common property and can be configured with the BGP community attribute. The BGP Community attribute is an optional transitive attribute of variable length. The attribute consists of a net of four octet values that specify a community. The community attribute values are encoded with an Autonomous System (AS) number in the first two octets, with the remaining two octets defined by the AS. A prefix can have more than one community attribute. A BGP speaker that sends multiple community attributes in a prefix can act based on one, none or all the attributes. A router has the option to add or modify a community attribute before the router passes the attribute on to other peers.
