NEW QUESTION: 3What technology can secure DNS information in IP networks?A. DNS encryptionB. DNSSECC.C. a combination of DNS and SSL/TLSD. a combination of DNS and IPSecAnswer: BExplanation:DNSSEC supplements the hierarchical nature of the DNS with cryptographic characteristics that make it possible to verify the authenticity of information stored in the DNS. This validation makes it possible for resolvers to be assured that when they request a particular piece of information from the DNS, that they do in fact receive the correct information as published by the authoritative source. This assurance is made possible using cryptographic signatures included in the DNS by a source organization. These signatures are calculated on a complete Resource Record set, not individual Resource Records. The signatures are published in a DNSSEC-specific resource record type called RRSIG. For example, setting aside the requisite infrastructure, by publishing the signature for an A record, the source organization makes it possible for resolvers on the Internet to verify that the A record contains authentic data and is correct aspublished. A DNS server is only signing data for which it is authoritative, for example, the DNS server does not sign NS records that delegate subdomains from its zone. Reference:
