NEW QUESTION: 2 Joe, the Chief Executive Officer (CEO), was an Information security professor and a Subject Matter Expert for over 20 years. He has designed a network defense method which he says is significantly better than prominent international standards. He has recommended that the company use his cryptographic method. Which of the following methodologies should be adopted? A. The company should develop an in-house solution and keep the algorithm a secret. B. The company should use the CEO's encryption scheme. C. The company should use the method recommended by other respected information security organizations. D. The company should use a mixture of both systems to meet minimum standards. Answer: C Explanation: In this question, we have one person's opinion about the best way to secure the network. His method may be more secure than other systems. However, for consensus of opinion, it is better to use the method recommended by other respected information security organizations. If the CEO's methods were the best methods, it is likely that the other respected information security organizations would have thought about them and would be using them. In other words, the methods recommended by other respected information security organizations are probably the best methods. Furthermore, if the company's systems need to communicate with external systems, the systems will need to use a 'standard' method otherwise the external system may not be able to decipher the communications from the company's systems.

Explanation: Explanation Note: You can create copies of LUNs by cloning LUNs from the Snapshot copies in a volume. These FlexClone LUNs are readable and writable copies of the LUNs as the LUN existed when the Snapshot copy was created. Before you can clone a LUN, you must create a Snapshot copy (the backing Snapshot copy) of the LUN you want to clone.
