NEW QUESTION: 1You are implementing a chassis cluster and adding the cluster to your multicast domain.Which two statements are valid considerations for this implementation scenario? (Choose two.)A. Multicast sessions are only maintained on the primary node in the cluster and will not be maintained during a failover scenario.B. The pe and pd interfaces are used to enable a cluster to act as a rendezvous point (RP) or first hop router in the multicast domain.C. The ppe and ppd interfaces are used to enable a cluster to act as a rendezvous point (RP) or first hop router in the multicast domain.D. Multicast sessions are synchronized on both nodes within the cluster and will be maintained during a failover scenario.Answer: C,D

Explanation:Multicast protocols are supported in chassis clustering for all SRX Series and J Series devices. J Series devices support pd and pe interfaces and SRX Series devices support ppd and ppe interfaces. If PIM sparse mode is enabled on any router (potentially a PIM sparse-mode source DR) and a Tunnel Services PIC is present on the router, a PIM register encapsulation interface, or pe interface, is automatically created for each RP address that is used to encapsulate source data packets and send them to respective RP addresses on the PIM DR as well as the PIM RP. The pe interface receives PIM register messages and encapsulates them by means of the hardware.Reference:
