(Select three) A. DAI should be enabled on the root switch for particular VLANs only in order to secure the ARP caches of hosts in the domain. B. DAI can be performed on both ingress and egress ports. C. DAI is supported on access and trunk ports only. D. DAI should be configured on all access switch ports as untrusted and on all switch ports connected to other switches as trusted. E. DAI is supported on access ports, trunk ports, EtherChannel ports, and private VLAN ports. F. DAI can be performed on ingress ports only. Answer: D, E, F Explanation: To prevent ARP spoofing or

"poisoning," a switch must ensure that only valid ARP requests and responses are relayed. DAI prevents these attacks by intercepting and validating all ARP requests and responses. Each intercepted ARP reply is verified for valid MAC-address-to-IP-address bindings before it is forwarded to a PC to update the ARP cache. ARP replies coming from invalid devices are dropped. DAI determines the validity of an ARP packet based on a valid MAC-address-to-IP-address bindings database built by DHCP snooping. In addition, to handle hosts that use statically configured IP addresses, DAI can also validate ARP packets against user-configured ARP ACLs. To ensure that only valid ARP requests and responses are relayed, DAI takes these actions:
