NEW QUESTION: 3You have two computers named Computer1 and Computer2 that run Windows 7.You use Remote Desktop to connect from Computer1 to Computer2.You need to prevent the desktop background of Computer2 from being displayed when you use Remote Desktop to connect to Computer2.What should you do on Computer1?A. From the Personalization options, change the theme.B. From the System properties, modify the Remote settings.C. From the Remote Desktop Connection options, modify the Display configuration settings.D. From the Remote Desktop Connection options, modify the Performance setting.Answer: D*Explanation:Configuring the Desktop ExperienceYou can configure the connection speed and fine-tune the desktop environment for optimal performance by using the settings located on the Experience tab of the Remote Desktop Connection tool. Most of these settings relate to the graphical nature of the desktop. Because the processing for graphics happens on the server and must be transmitted to the desktop over the network connection, you can increase performance by allowing only the minimal settings that are necessary for your users. When you choose a connection speed, the check boxes are automatically selected to indicate the recommended settings for the richest visual experience possible at that speed.ExperienceConfigure the connection speed and adjust the desktop environment for optimal performance.Desktop background Allows user to choose a custom background or wallpaper for their desktop. Because these can be very graphicintensive, disable this setting unless it is necessary for your users.
