NEW QUESTION: 1An accountant who reviews the financial statements of a nonissuer should issue a report stating that a review:A. Provides negative assurance that the internal control structure is functioning as designed.B. Provides only limited assurance that the financial statements are fairly presented.C. Is substantially more in scope than a compilation.D. Is substantially less in scope than an audit.Answer: D
Explanation:Explanation/Reference: Explanation:Choice "A" is correct. An accountant who reviews the financial statements of a nonissuer should issue a report stating that a review is substantially less in scope than an audit. (This is why you have to "memorize" the key phrases in the review and compilation reports.) Choice "B" is incorrect. Internal control inquiries are not part of a review, and therefore assurances related to internal control are inappropriate.Choice "C" is incorrect. A review does provide limited assurance as to GAAP, but this is not the appropriate wording for the report. Choice "D" is incorrect. Review report language compares a review with an audit, not with a compilation.
